Proposer's Comments:

Aimee Perron Seibert would be a tremendous asset to the James River Garden Club - not only for her love of gardening and floral design but also for her deep commitment to service and community. Aimee tends to her terraced garden at Sunnybrook, her historic home on Old Locke Lane, originally designed by renowned landscape architect Charles Gillette. Her appreciation for the history and beauty of gardens is evident in how thoughtfully she cares for her own. She also has a keen eye for floral design and, after seven years of service on the Altar Guild, is still frequently called upon by friends, family and the church to create arrangements for special events.

Beyond her talents, Aimee is a tireless and dependable volunteer. For the past ten years as a parent volunteer, she has faithfully taken on the task of placing signs for Saint Catherine's School Daisy Days - just one example of her willingness to take on the quiet, behind-the-scenes work that ensures success. She brings that same dedication and cheerful can-do spirit to every project, and she would undoubtedly be a generous and hands-on contributor during Historic Garden week. Her home would be a stunning addition to the tour, and through her active involvement in the Country Club of Virginia, she brings a wide circle of relationships that would strengthen the Club's reach and engagement.

Aimee is also deeply engaged in the Richmond community. She is currently serving her second term on the Maymont Foundation Board of Directors, further reflecting her commitment to preserving and celebrating our region's horticultural heritage. Professionally, Aimee is a government relations consultant and owns her own firm, allowing her the flexibility to devote meaningful time and energy to her personal interests and community commitments. The James River Garden club would be fortunate to welcome Aimee into its membership. She brings beauty, generosity, and an admirable work ethic - qualities that align perfectly with the Club's mission and traditions.
